The little incident which some time ago attracted attention at the Registrar-General's office, and ended in the dismissal of the Chinese Interpreter Mr. U-LACON from that Department, ought to be productive of good effect as it at least teaches a useful tesson. On delay as much as possible. the postdarity of his translation being discovered we understand that some attempt was made to induce the authorities to believe that the translation given really represented what it was intended to convey, but a careful consultation of sinologues failed to verify this legibtedly the strongest illustration ever given to the guage is meant to conceal one's thoughts and not to express them. Mr. there has been nothing said about the wayin which this was announced, we presume it has been correctly stated. It would be rather that a remour was current on the 16th instant, awkward if a further misrepresentation had at the yamun of the Governor-General, that been made, as it might in that way become necessary to dismiss all the interpreters before it would be possible to get one to put had been sent by the Governor-General to the into the language of Confucius why an ignorant and irate their Government had dis-pensed with the sorvices of these valuable affair is strongly illustrative of the

We have repeatedly called attention to this fact in connection with the Registrar-General's Departmen, which has at times been lett far too much under the control of Chinese subordinates, and the incident which recently came before the public illustrates the truth of our position. We will not say that it proves it, because there ure for stronger grounds for the view than one incident of this kind. The concurrent opinion of large numbers who have been ngaged with Chinese teachers and interpictors could be easily obtained to the offeet that they are only to be trusted when very closely watched. Yet so insinuating are they in their manner, and so much tact do likey display in worming themselves into people's confidence, that in many cases they are more trusted than would be the case even with European interpretors, who might fall into error, but who would not be guilty of wilful misrepresentation. The writer could give some very interesting incidents within his own experience of the persistency with which Chinese interpreters will set about misrepresenging things, which are not likely to prove palatable to some of their countrymen but the one which has insmediately called forth thesegremarks is as good a specimen perhaps as could be obtained. The English-speaking these interpretors are very nicely-dressed; suave, and ontlemanly people in their way, but all exercience proves that they cannot be implicitly relice upon in matters in which their countrymen are conferned. There may be some exceptions, but the general rule is beyond question. Every Chinaman is impreynated what the feeling that his first duty is to assist his own friends and countrymen, and though this tendency may be resisted on ome occasions, it requires only sofficient inducement for it to assert itself in almost any. one who has been brought up under the traditions of the Colostial Empire. In the hurry of business mistakes may of course occur, but it is a populiar fact that there is no instance on record where a native interpreter has been found making a mistake of the kind against his countrymen. The little slips are always in the opposite direction. There must of necessity be much difficulty in checking irregularities of this kind, but there are a few simple procautions which would render such attempts so liable to de tection as to reduce them at all events to minimum. We shall content ourselves with suggesting two. One is to make it a rule to check interpretations by outside sources; and the trial should be completed so far as the Court sway the syll spirits. The evidence then given were evidently much interested in witnessing quence, took place in the Tong-ne-lann street the other, to adopt a plan which has often was doncerned, and that the question was the same as that of Chug-n-poen. He the due observance of this the dost popular of of this city. It appears that two watchmen, before been recommended in these columns, that of putting all Chinese announcements in the regular Government Gazetts. The former premution would amount simply to doing what seas within the acceptance of, but boyond, the expenses. He would like to kny the working was actually done in the case under notice three mile limit of the Chinese coast, It was, of that place. after ground for suspicion had been discovered. The very fact that there was the chance of such a course being taken would probably have sufficient moral force to put an end to attempts at convenient translations. The advantages of the second suggestion are obvious. The plan would have the offect of bringing all Chinese announcements, under the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. the notice of all those in the Government Service who are likely to detect errors, and the Chinese text being in juxtaposition with the cause, since the case was remanded, he had extra hard labour, and price him to make English version, there would be every chance of deviations being detected. THE AFRIVAN SLAVE TRADE. A meeting is to be held at Stafford House on a rich new confinerce with the country and the subject of the East African Slave Trade, once Africa Lea peace from the slave hunts, once Africa Lea peace from the slave hunts, once Africa Lea peace from the slave hunts, the would repay righty any such enterprise. Startly will be there representing Livingstone's labours and memory. Both the states and and the traveller will tell the meeting one and the slave squadron on the coast effective; and the traveller will tell the meeting one and the same sad and shameful tale, which is that the generic as pirates are. Ho read that a British East African slave trade is this year more officer "could have set free", two hundred torflourishing by sea and land then if we had tured human creatures, and that he did not, i never heard the carnest messages of the great poorly spologised for by the obligations of in-missionary, and had never concluded the treaty ternational ctiquette in a place like the African with Sultan Burghash. It will be asked what wilderness. It is idle to chase slave ships on is our authority for this humiliating declara. The sea and hobnob with slave drivers on the tion. We reply by quoting from the Parlia. We had better leave the sad Continent mentary Report just published the com- to its fate than do our duty in this half-andplacent avowals of some of the principal half manner. We trust that there will be heard Arab merchants engaged in the man-steal words at the Duke of Sutherland's house which ing traffic. At Kisiju Captain Elton reports: will ring through the land, and mark the be-There has never been such a good year, ginning of a new effort to couple with the said one owner of a long string; 'there is great record of England the utter and final annihilademand, and no duty levied by the Sultan; the tion of this infernal traffic. 24 dollars which went to him before, for slaves shipped by sen, we save, and the land journey is worked at a profit. They acknowledged the trouble at first had been great, adding, Now there is none we have fixed balting-places and send on men ahead; everything is read for us when we arrive." At Kikunia, another place upon the mainland opposite Zanzibar; this officer, our Vice Consul at Zanzibar, was lying ill on the S0th of last January. He saw a caravan of 400 slaves pass through the village, and, on the next day, a far larger one of some 1,100 filing past within eight of his bed in long chain gangs, laden with provisions for the rond. The leader of the latter, one Manji Hadji, conceived it his duty to call on Captain Elton, accompanied by about tight of his men armed with muskets. He was very communicative, and said "he had been away two years, did not know exactly how many slaves he ha more than 1,000 certainly; was obliged to murch slowly, as some had been a year and a half in the gange; bad taken seven days from Kilwa; thought it a good thing the sea route was olosed, was he saved duty, and the land journey was cheaper; was bound to Pangani; yes, this was a big slave year certainly." Between December 21st and Jahuary 20th last:

1 wo British officials saw with their own oyes over 4,000 wretched, haggard, blacks, of the African interior driven in slave-forks along the coast road from Dar-as-Salam to Kilwa. They estimated the number to be about half the rea total of passing caravats, and this was for thirty days only of the season. The meeting at Stafford House may be told to multiply by twenty this number of four thousand slaves to obtain mything like an idea of the rowing traffic which is done in despite of our treaty, and yet, more and to say, 80,000 men, women, and children thus polled represent but a third or fourth part of the number of poor Africans captured from the interior tribes. At least this proportion perial in the sufferings of the long march down to the coast; and besides the horrible cruelties which they endure, all honest trade to the Mastern continent, it must be remembered, is paralysed by the infamous, husiness, and every Arab scoundrel laughs at the baffled power of the British Government. But it will be asked how it happened that Captain Elton and Lieutenant Pullen-both British officials—could see with their own eyes these slave-oursyans go by, and do nothing to deliver the miscrable victims. The reply is that, by the too nice delicacy of diplomatic etiquette, they had no power to interfere. They were sent last winter, under Dr. Kirk's instructions, to the mainland with orders to visit the villages where Indians were living, and to insist toon the insuctinte liberation of any slaves held by these subjects of her Majesty. It was in the pourso of executing this mission that they came across the everwhelming proofs mentioned of the flourishing state of this accursed traffic. The treaty with the Zanzibar Sultun gives us no power to interfere with the transport of slaves by land, except where British subjects may be conformed. Thus, while the Commissioners set free some few dozens of slaves, they were obliged to look tamely on and witness all these thousands of starved and sickly captives marched impadently past them. On one occasion, in crossing the Pafent river, Capt. Elton's little party came suddenly upon a slave turavan toiling along in chain-gangs of sixteen. The mere eight of one of the daptuin's native servants, wearing an English sun-hat was enough to scatter the wicked drivers in wild confusion. The cry of Wazungo !-- " the whiteman.")-was raised; and each, section of the caravail was littried into the bush, and Captain Elton reports, " Had we wished to do so, nothing would have been casier than to have taken away 200 slayes without any one to oppose our action. There were, I estimated, about 800 in all, in wretched condition. One gang of lade and wemen, chained together with iron-nock rings, was torn with thorns, their bodies mere frameworks, and their skeleton limbs tightly stretched over -with wrinkled pareliment-like skin.
